Art Club Notes.
The Art Club listened to an interesting and informing description of some of the most unusual methods employed by illustrators in placing before the public the excellent pictures so frequently shown by current magazines and other periodicals by Carl Rostrup, the well-known Richmond illustrator. Mr. Rostrup's knowledge of his subject made his remarks of especial value, and the specimens of work done by the different processes was particularly interesting. Starting with the photograph or other illustration, Mr. Rostrup carried his audience through the various processes involved in the "three-color print," the various rapid methods employed by the daily newspaper, and made his descriptions so plain and clear that his listeners were quite carried away by the magic of the subject.

The artist is now engaged in art of a higher type, and having decided to remain here, has become a feature in the local art world.
Next Tuesday, at the usual hour, Mr. Valentine, the well-known writer and poet, will discourse before this Art Club on "Poetry" and its cognate subjects. Mr. Valentine is too well known in Richmond to need commendation and stands like to good wine of the old saw; he "needs no bush."

The Art Club is giving an illustrative review of the year's work of its classes, and it will be to the advantage of all lovers of art to be present at this exhibition in order to compare the present advances in art with the work of the past years.

The membership of the Art Club of Richmond is divided into three classes—members with annual dues of $2; junior members, whose annual dues are also $2, and patrons or contributing members, whose annual dues are fixed at $10. All members are entitled to the use of the club rooms and all exhibitions and entertainments, the only restriction being upon the junior members, who are not entitled to vote.

PINEHURST

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Pinehurst, N. C., March 16.—Mid-season affairs have rounded out a full week, perfect spring days giving added interest to outdoor sports and recreations, with interest centered in the annual living pictures given at the Carolina in aid of the Village Club charitable fund, under the direction of Miss Caroline Fuller, of New York, who has so successfully managed the affairs in the past. Perfectly carried out to minute detail, the program was an artistic treat not soon to be forgotten, including "figures" of all-nation types and heads of famous masterpieces.

For the immediate future the Village Club Kirmess of all-nation dances in native costume, the Village Club open air fete, a native "fiddler's convention," and the annual tin whistle dinner are planned, preceding the annual spring cotillion and the usual equestrian gymnastics planned for the last week of March.

The number of arrivals who come to remain through April is taxing the capacity of the village.

Miss Lila Stewart, of New York City, who is spending some time in this city. Miss Stewart is a prominent society woman, and is directing the big society Kirmess that will be given under the direction of two prominent charities here in April.
